FOREWORD

Indian Agriculture is transforming greatly in the past few decades. Besides efficient water and input management, mechanization of farm operations are becoming indispensable. Sustaining the current levels of production, timeliness of operation, efficient application of fertilizers and plant protection chemicals, reducing the human drudgery and increasing the safety and comfort of farm workers are the main objectives of mechanization. Increasing costs of labour and reducing availability of farm workers make mechanization indispensable.

Selective and appropriate mechanization was recommended for long in the country. Often: Selective for what? and Appropriate to whom? are the questions unanswered. We have not resorted to high capacity and high powered machinery for farm operations owing to the small land holding sizes. But the latest introduction of combines in rice producing areas has created a paradigm shift in our thinking. Huge combines are used in small and tiny farms too for harvesting paddy crops.

If huge machines such as combines have made their ways into our tiny paddy fields, then why not introducing mechanical powers at all sizes for different farm operations. Our research efforts over several decades after independence have resulted in numerous machineries for different farm operations. These machineries are ranging in sizes from small to very large and operational capacities from few cents to acres of coverage in a given unit time.

Numerous producers have come forward to make these machineries and market them. The producers also range from small scale producers to very large scale players. Often the farmers and other farm machinery operators do not have access to the knowledge on who produces and what range of products they produce. Due to the lack of such vital information the buyers are forced to buy farm machines based on the availability in the region than based on needs. Making information available on the farm machinery producers is very important for making farm machinery popular in the country.

With this motive, the editors of this compendium have come up with an exhaustive list of farm tractors, power tillers and machinery producers and dealers in the country. The information contained in this compendium will be useful to farmers, extension workers, scientists, students, engineers, manufacturers and teachers. A word of appreciation and congratulations are due to the editors of this highly useful compendium.

PREFACE

The total power availability on Indian farms has increased from 0.293 to 1.841 kW/ha at CAGR of 4.58% during the last forty one years. The overall mechanization level in India is only 28-30% even though 90% of the total farm power is contributed by mechanical and electrical power sources. One of the major constraints of increasing agricultural production and productivity is the inadequacy of farm power and machinery with the farmers. The average farm power availability needs to be increased to minimum 2.5 kW/ha to assure timeliness and quality in field operations, undertake heavy field operations like sub-soiling, chiseling, deep ploughing and summer ploughing.

For research and development, testing and popularization of need based farm implements and machinery for different regions of the country, the Indian Council of Agricultural Research (ICAR) launched the All India Coordinated Research Project (AICRP) on Farm Implements and Machinery (FIM) in 1975 with six centres. The number of centres increased during different Five Year Plan periods and presently there are 24 centres working on one or more of three distinct activities under the Project - research and development, prototype manufacturing and prototype feasibility testing.

The research and development activity in AICRP on FIM involves design, development, testing and design refinement of need-based farm implements and machinery. Prototype manufacturing activity is for multiplication of research prototypes for multi-location trials, development of manufacturing technology for new machines and promoting their manufacture by involving local manufacturers. The addresses of reputed manufacturer/dealers of improved equipment in different states all across the country will serve as reference material for research and extension workers as well as farmers to bridge the gaps in farm mechanization.

The Directory of Crop Production Machinery Manufacturers is an attempt to make available a comprehensive source of information on various crop production machinery manufacturers/dealers in one place. The information has been categorised on the basis of chronology of states of India. The list of manufacturers of tractors and power tillers are also included in the directory. However, their dealer's addresses are not included in the directory and may be obtained by visiting company website whose addresses are given in the directory.

During the course of this work, the information provided by research workers and manufacturers through their publication, pamphlets, and personal correspondence have widely been adopted and edited for brevity and relevance. It is hoped that this compilation on crop production machinery manufacturers would be welcomed by the farming community, extension workers, scientists, students, engineers, manufacturers and teachers resulting in the increased awareness about availability of crop production machinery in different states of India and pave the way for their early adoption. The list of manufacturers provided in the directory is aimed at creating a useful interface for direct interaction by the prospective users to further their knowledge and benefit by adopting them.

The information provided in this work has been compiled from various sources and every effort has been made to make it as comprehensive and correct as far as possible without favour or prejudice. However, the inadvertent omission of some of the manufacturers does not imply their exclusion and they are requested to bring it to our notice for inclusion in a future edition of this compilation.

Dr. S. Ayyappan, Secretary, DARE and Director General, Indian Council of Agricultural Research and Dr. Director General (Engg.), Indian Council of Agricultural Research, New Delhi have been the source of inspiration in the preparation of this Directory of Crop Production Machinery Manufacturers. We are very grateful to them for their motivation and guidance. We are also thankful to Dr. Kanchan K. Singh, ADG (Farm Engg.), ICAR; Dr. K. K. Singh, Director, Central Institute of Agricultural Engineering, Bhopal; Dr. L. P. Gite, Project Coordinator, AICRP on ESA and Dr. P. C. Bargale, Head, Technology Transfer Division of CIAE for their help in bringing out this directory.

We are thankful to the Research Engineers of the Project and their organisations for providing basic information on different manufacturers of farm tools and equipment in the region. I also thank Dr. B. Gaikwad, Dr. R. K. Tiwari, Dr. R. K. Pajnoo, Er. Yashwant Bhokardankar, Shri A. S. Barod, Mrs. Manju Lohani and Shri Radhey Shyam Kushwaha for their contribution in the preparation of the manuscript. We are thankful to all those who have helped directly or indirectly in preparing this manufacturers directory.
